

Alfredo's Pizza

Woodfired pizza until late in this rowdy, fun venue on Alfred Street.

By Sarah Coates

It's safe to say that if Alfredo were a real person (and not just a sleazy looking gent in a singlet staring at you from the wall of this pizza joint), he would most definitely be an Italian-Australian. Whilst the menu at Alfredo's is obviously Italian in inspiration, there is a strong Aussie influence on these wood-fired delights.

The pizza menu, with names inspired by rock stars, offers classics like the Chuck Berry (aka Margherita, tomato, basil, mozzarella, oregano) but the Aussie influence starts to creep in on such occasions as the Joan Jett (popcorn chicken, bbq sauce, pancetta, mayo) and the Butthole Surfers (good old pineapple and candied bacon). So this isn't old-school Italian like you might get at nonna's, but if you can set your prejudice aside, it's pretty tasty high-brow junk food.

For late night dining, Alfredo's is a solid bet. Pizza by the slice until 3am on weekends, and it's actually woodfired? Yes please. But the real golden nugget with this place is that they deliver – and not just pizza, but drinks. So if you live in one of the surrounding suburbs, you can get your pizza, and a six pack, or a bottle of wine, champagne, or even spirits delivered to straight to your door. Grazie, Alfredo.
